Historic C Lazy U Guest Ranch Welcomes The Original “Horse Whisperer”

Frontier Airlines discount and children-stay-free, highlight horsemanship and cattle clinics

GRANBY, Colo. – Nationally renowned horse trainer Buck Brannaman – inspiration for the Robert Redford-directed movie “The Horse Whisperer,” – is hosting horsemanship and cattle working clinics at the historic C Lazy U Guest Ranch (www.clazyu.com).

The adult-only clinics run August 27th through September 1st, 2006, and children 6-17 stay free. Those planning to fly save an immediate 10 percent off Frontier Airlines flights, with an additional 50 percent applied as a credit at the end of their stay, which can save a family of four as much as $640. Guests must call the Frontier Group Desk at 800-908-9069 and give the code MC099F to receive the discount. For complete details, visit www.clazyu.com/Frontier.htm.

“Buck is part of our Western heritage, more like a national treasure,” said Brian Murray, owner of the C Lazy U Ranch. “This is a rare opportunity to experience his legendary methods of teaching horses and riders to understand and communicate with each other.”

Murray also advised that Brannaman will not be touring in 2007, so he won’t be conducting this very popular clinic again at C Lazy U until 2008.

Brannaman will teach a foundation horsemanship clinic in the mornings and a cattle working clinic in the afternoons. Rates include the clinic, trail riding, lodging, meals and all ranch activities. Full-day, age-specific childrens’ programs are available through Camp C Lazy U. Riders may bring and board their own horse, free of charge.
